

Utah has many honey bee colonies. Bees pollinate crops such as vegetables, fruit, flowers and plants for Utah's farmers, in addition to producing honey for you to enjoy! Their hives will look like boxes out in a field. See if you can spot some in Uintah or Sanpete Counties. Many Utah honey producers keep their bees in a warmer climate during winter months, such as California. You can see hives being transported to and from Utah on semi-trucks! Watch out for honey bees, they've got quite a sting! Utah ranks 22nd in the U.S. in honey production.
