Strengthening and Educating Rural America

The University of Nebraska - Nebraska College of Technical Agriculture (NCTA) in cooperation with its sister institution, the West Central Research and Extension Center (WCREC), have a long tradition of serving the Nebraska agricultural industry. This service includes agricultural research and the extension of that research information through academic programs located at NCTA and distributed throughout Nebraska through University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension programs. Combined, NCTA and WCREC maintain over 15,000 acres of crop and range land, 650 cows, and teaching facilities that include an indoor arena, horse barn, cattle handling facilities, conference center, and a large array of classrooms and teaching laboratories. NCTA and WCREC are dedicated to providing a dynamic education in agriculture and an understanding of important economic factors that are important to rural Nebraska's future.
